NEW CIPF TRAVEL GRANTS PROGRAM TO PARTICIPATE IN SCIENTIFIC MEETINGS

Grants are offered to CIPF predocs and postdocs to attend national and international congresses

These awards offer new opportunities to enrich scientific training through their participation in scientific conferences

Valencia (24/01/2019) .- The Prince Felipe Research Center (CIPF) offers its predoctoral students and postdoctoral researchers new grants to attend national and international conferences, as long as their oral communications or posters have been accepted. Grants are up to 400€ for national congresses and conferences and up to 600€ for international meetings.

This initiative, announced today by the Director of the CIPF, has been proposed by the Education Committee of the CIPF, coordinated by Dr. Vicente Felipo. This Committee requested that the Center should create a program to fund travel to national and international scientific conferences.

These travels awards are part of the Strategic Plan of the CIPF for the next 5 years, which includes strengthening the international visibility of the CIPF and the commitment to scientific and excellence education for students and postdocs. The CIPF develops an intense teaching and training activity for the research staff in order to offer an environment of scientific excellence in which students and researchers improve their knowledge and skills. The new travel grants promote active and face-to-face participation in scientific meetings outside the Valencia Region.

In addition, the CIPF has recently applied for funding from the Conselleria de Sanitat to promote scientific collaborations/exchanges with laboratories outside of Spain. Visits must be between one and three months with awards of up to 1500€/month for living expenses.
